College Names Nicholas Koziol to Alumni Affairs

Nicholas J. Koziol, a residence hall director at SUNY Cortland for the past two years, joined the Alumni Association as its associate director of alumni affairs on April 23.

He replaces Michelina Gibbons, who moved within the College to work as a career resource specialist in the Career Services Office on Jan. 2.

In his new position, Koziol oversees the College's 13 alumni chapters across New York State and in Boston, Atlanta and the Mid-Atlantic area. Koziol helps recruit and train alumni volunteers and assists each chapter in organizing two events each year.

Another of Koziol's responsibilities will be working on a new initiative focusing on ways to involve more young alumni in the life of the College, both on or off campus.

"Nick's experience with Cortland undergraduates will make it easier for us to establish the types of programs and services our younger alumni want and need," said Doug DeRancy '75, alumni affairs.

Koziol began working at SUNY Cortland in 2004, when he was appointed residence hall director of Randall Hall. The following year, he became director of Alger Hall and in 2006 he was appointed coordinator of Smith and Casey Towers, where he supervised a staff of 18 people. He was responsible for building a positive atmosphere among the 500 students who lived in Smith and Casey Towers by advising them and helping plan programs.

Besides his work in Residential Services, Koziol completed an internship last spring in the Career Services Office, where he helped students write resumes and cover letters and worked on Teacher Recruitment Days. He has served on many College committees, including the Connections Committee and the Housing Committee, and also has been the club advisor for Alpha Phi Omega, a service fraternity.

Koziol said he applied for the position of associate director of alumni affairs because he enjoys working with people and traveling.

A native of Huntington, N.Y., Koziol earned a bachelor's degree in English at SUNY Fredonia. He received his master's degree in student personnel administration from SUNY Buffalo.

He resides in Cortland with his wife, Lori, a substitute teacher, and their daughter Madeline.

In addition to his teaching duties, Cottone has undertaken numerous leadership roles at the College. He has served since 2001 as chair of the Kinesiology Department, formerly called the Exercise Science and Sport Studies Department. The program director for athletic training since 1985, he was responsible for bringing the program up to national certification standards.

Cottone has served on more than 30 committees, many of which address critical components of the College's mission, including the College Curriculum Review Committee, Faculty Senate and Student Health Advisory Committee. His leadership led to his appointment as chair of the Educational Policy Committee and of the Curriculum Task Force. He also shared his expertise in health and safety as a member of the Emergency Squad Advisory Board and the Automated External Defibrillator Task Force.

Since receiving his doctorate in education from Syracuse University, Cottone has been a manuscript reviewer for Human Kinetics, a publishing company. He has also written articles for several athletic training journals and presented papers at athletic conferences throughout the northeast.

He began his professional career as an assistant professor of physical education at Castleton State College in Vermont in 1979. He became an associate professor of physical education at SUNY Cortland in 1985.

Cottone resides in Virgil, N.Y., with his wife Brenda, who works at Citadel Communications. They have two children, Nicole and Caitlin.

During her 20 years at the College, Mosher has taught more than 120 courses to undergraduate and graduate students in what became the Childhood/Early Childhood Department. She has supervised hundreds of student teachers, coordinated elementary education practicum courses and mentored students through independent study projects.

Mosher uses a constructivist teaching philosophy that is student-centered with an emphasis on reflection, multi-modal instruction, the importance of teaching self-efficacy and the need to find what motivates students. Her courses require students to engage in a variety of learning experiences, including lectures, hands-on activities, oral presentations, application of technology and extensive writing assignments.

Mosher began her career at SUNY Cortland as an adjunct supervisor. She became an assistant professor in 1990 and an associate professor in 2002.

Mosher earned her bachelor's degree in English literature at the University of California at Los Angeles. She earned her master's degree in teaching and her doctorate in education at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

She resides in Cortland and is married to Stephen Mosher, a professor in sport management and media at Ithaca College. They have four children, David Current, John Current, Chasity Mosher and Edmund Mosher.

Catherine A. Smith

Smith, a health educator at the College since 1991, becomes the 19th SUNY Cortland staff member to receive the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Professional Service.

The first officially designated SUNY Cortland health educator, Smith created the College's health program, developing initiatives dealing with alcohol, sex and drugs as well as a peer education program. Smith, a Freedom from Smoking Clinic facilitator of the American Lung Association of Central New York, has coordinated programs addressing smoking cessation, nutrition, eating disorders and stress.

She has initiated several other innovative programs on campus, including the Wednesday Wellness Series, which each semester offers students a variety of informative workshops on key health issues. She started the Handkerchief Project, a memorial to those killed in alcohol-related accidents, and the "Connections Coffee Houses," weekend alternatives for students aimed at combating college-age drinking.

As the campus spokesperson for health emergencies, Smith was assigned the responsibility of creating the Emergency Infection Control Plan in 1994. The College implemented the plan just after it was developed during a meningitis scare, when about 5,000 students, faculty and staff were immunized.

The policy was so well-written it later became a model for several other SUNY campuses.

Smith earned her bachelor's degree in religious studies at LeMoyne College in Syracuse, N.Y., and her master's degree in health education at SUNY Cortland. A resident of Cortland, she is married to Stephen J. Smith, a senior counselor in the College's Counseling Center. They have two grown daughters, Christine and Danielle.

Michael P. Toglia

Toglia, who joined the Psychology Department in 1978, becomes the sixth SUNY Cortland faculty member to receive the Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Scholarship and Creative Activities.

A nationally known authority in the fields of human cognition and information processing, Toglia is frequently called on to testify in court as an expert in eyewitness identification and testimony, particularly with regard to children. He has also participated in the signing of several amicus curiae briefs presented to courts around the nation.

As a result of years of extensive research, Toglia this year co-edited two cutting-edge volumes in his field: Handbook of Eyewitness Psychology: Memory for Events, Vol. 1 and Handbook of Eyewitness Psychology: Memory for People, Vol. 2. He has co-edited seven other books, ranging from Children's Eyewitness Memory (1987) to Autobiographical Memory: Theoretical and Applied Perspectives (1998). Toglia earned his bachelor's degree in psychology from the University of Arizona in Tucson. He received a master's degree in experimental psychology and a doctoral degree in experimental (cognitive) psychology from the University of Colorado in Boulder.

He resides in Homer, N.Y., and is married to Cathleen Toglia, a math teacher at Tully (N.Y.) High School. They have two grown children, Brian and Jessica.
