Introductory Biology Class Recognized Among Nation's Best Practices Courses

A SUNY Cortland biologist has won national recognition for teaching a course that has been designated as one of the top examples of a biology course in the country.

Principles of Biology, taught by Mary Beth Voltura, biological sciences, was selected an overall best practices course by a panel of national experts from among 149 courses nominated nationwide.

Voltura's course was one of seven endorsed from among those reviewed as having specific elements of an exemplary biology course, including content, use of new technology, student expectations and assessment.

"In all my years at Cortland, this is very unusual," said Biological Sciences Department Chair Louis A. Gatto, who has taught at the College for nearly 30 years.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime event for a college professor."

Working for the College Board, the non-profit group that runs the Advancement Placement (AP) program, the study attempted to identify best practices courses that would help a national redesign of AP courses in biology taught to high school students. The review of courses was conducted by the Center for Educational Policy Research (CEPR), affiliated with the University of Oregon in Eugene.

The goal of the project is to develop AP courses that closely reflect the best practices of college biology courses. The Advanced Placement program, administered by the College Board, allows high school students to take college-level courses and to earn

American Speech-Language-Hearing Association Presents Prestigious Award to Regina Grantham

Associate Professor Regina Grantham, the chair of the Speech Pathology and Audiology Department, was named an American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA) Fellow at the national organization's annual convention on Nov. 17 in Miami Beach, Fla.

One of the highest honors that ASHA can bestow, the title of ASHA Fellow is retained for life. Honorees are members who have made outstanding contributions to the profession and who have distinguished themselves with their professional and/or scientific achievement.

Founded in 1925, ASHA is the professional, scientific and credentialing association for more than 123,000 members and affiliates who are speech-language pathologists, audiologists, and speech, language, and hearing scientists both in the United States and internationally.

Grantham was one of 30 ASHA Fellows from 19 states to be honored in 2006.

"I'm humbled by this honor," said Grantham, who joined the SUNY Cortland faculty in 1993. "I am in very illustrious company and I'm moved to be there. However, no one gets there alone. I'm grateful to my very supportive department, faculty and administration, and to my husband, Robert."

Within ASHA, Grantham has served on 16 committees, task forces and boards over 20 years. She chaired both the Political Action Committee and the Council on Professional Ethics and served on the Governmental Relations and Public Policy Board. She guided the organization

ASC Caribbean Dinner Wins National Award From College Food Service Trade Group

“Caribbean Cruise Night,” an extravaganza featuring specialty foods from the islands that was held at SUNY Cortland last February, has won a silver award from the National Association of College and University Food Services (NACUFS).

The 2006 Loyal E. Horton Dining Award is the first the College has ever received from the trade association, based in Okemos, Mich., which serves more than 600 institutions of higher education around the world. SUNY Cortland was one of 170 colleges and universities that competed for an award in seven separate categories.

SUNY Cortland tied with Vanderbilt University for a silver medal in the medium-sized school category for Residence Hall Dining – Theme Dinner. The gold medal in the category went to the University of Maine and the bronze went to Brown University.

“It’s a hard thing when you put yourself out there and compete with other schools, but to get the recognition that we did speaks to the exceptional quality of the staff,” said Dana Wavle, Auxiliary Services Corporation (ASC), a not-for-profit organization providing dining, retail and vending services at SUNY Cortland.

“Caribbean Cruise Night,” held in Neubig Dining Hall, involved five months of planning and cooperation from all of the dining managers who work on campus. Nearly 1,200 students attended the event, which was held on a Tuesday night to accommodate students who commute to the College.

The event offered four “ports-of-call” — Key West, St. Martin, Aruba and Curaçao, and the Onboard Cruise — each of which offered specialty entrees from the Caribbean, such as crab cakes, Mexican fajitas, sweet potato pancakes and salmon crowns. A dessert bar, featuring a chocolate fountain, and music with a disc jockey followed the dinner. ASC also gave away a $1,000 gift certificate to Joette Ostanek, a junior from Binghamton, N.Y., to apply toward a cruise of her choice as a grand prize at the event.

“We wanted to give the students something they had never experienced here at Cortland,” said Director of Dining Services Bill McNamara, who coordinated the event.

McNamara said the College submitted a scrapbook detailing the event, complete with recipes and pictures, to NACUFS to compete for the award. He said he expects SUNY Cortland to compete for another award after this year’s major theme dinner, “Making Magic Happen Vegas Style,” scheduled for Feb. 20 in Neubig Hall.

Wavle noted that the major theme dinners are one of several changes undertaken by the campus dining services since McNamara began working at SUNY Cortland in 2003. McNamara was previously an operations manager for Cornell University Dining.

Last fall, ASC changed the meal plans from a retail format, in which students had a declining balance on their meal cards, to a plan that guaranteed a certain number of meals each week for the entire semester. ASC’s annual surveys have given the meal plans and value the highest level of satisfaction, McNamara said.

Health Department Offers Inaugural Poskanzer Lecture

Robert E. Fullilove, associate dean at Columbia University’s Mailman School of Public Health, will deliver the inaugural Charles N. Poskanzer Lecture on Tuesday, Nov. 28.

Fullilove’s talk, titled “Eliminating Racial and Ethnic Disparities: Public Health Policies and Priorities” begins at 6 p.m. in Brockway Hall Jacobus Lounge. A reception in the same location will precede Fullilove’s speech at 5:30 p.m.

Sponsored by the Health Department, the lecture is free and open to the public.

Fullilove is the author of a recent report, “African Americans, Health Disparities and HIV/AIDS: Recommendations for Confronting the Epidemic in Black America,” released by the National Minority AIDS Council (NMAC) in advance of World AIDS Day on Dec. 1. A blue-ribbon expert advisory panel of some 30 African-American leaders endorses its recommendations.

“Eliminating racial and ethnic disparities in health has long been a national priority,” said Assistant Professor of Health Jena Curtis, an event organizer. “Join us for an examination of the current data about minority health in the U.S. and an exploration of the ongoing debate about the most effective methods for achieving this lofty goal.”

The event is made possible through donations to the Charles N. Poskanzer Fund, named in honor of the SUNY Distinguished Service Professor who taught in the Health Department for 40 years.

For more information, contact Ben E. Wodi, health, at ext. 2989, or Curtis at ext. 2979.

Two Performances of Nutcracker Ballet Planned

Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker" will be presented by the Performing Arts Department and The Performing Arts Institute. The ballet will take place at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 2, and at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 3, in the Dowd Fine Arts Theatre.

The complete ballet will be performed using musical theatre students from the college and area children and teenagers who take dance classes with the Performing Arts Institute.

The production is choreographed by Kevin and Cindy Halpin, performing arts. Howard Lindh and Joel Pape, performing arts, are responsible for scenic design, and lighting and sound, respectively. Costumes are by Sandra Vest and the Halpins.

Featured in the large cast are Molly McSherry as Clara, Tim Fuchs as the Nutcracker who becomes the Prince, Josh Williams as the Mouse King, Dick Baker as Uncle Drosselmeyer, Audra Rizzo as the Sugar Plum Fairy, and Stephen Cottonaro as Mother Ginger.

Tickets for "The Nutcracker" are $12 for the general public, $10 for senior citizens and SUNY staff, and $7 for all students and children. Tickets are on sale at Jodi's Hallmark Shop. Remaining tickets will be on sale at the door before each performance.

For more information, contact the Performing Arts Department at ext. 2811.

Nov. 28 Concert to Feature Music for the Advent Season

The Choral Union, under the direction of Stephen B. Wilson, performing arts, will present a concert of "Music for the Advent Season" at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 28, in the Dowd Fine Arts Theater.

The program will consist of two major selections, J. S. Bach's Cantata #61, "Nun komm, der Heiden Heiland," (Come Now, Saviour of Humankind) and Lloyd Pfautsch's "A Day for Dancing."

The Bach work will be sung in the original German. It features pianist Alan Giambattista and soloists tenor Connor Gates, baritone Stuart Gillim, and soprano Marion Giambattista.

The Pfautsch selection is an unusual setting of medieval English texts that celebrate the Advent season through the medium of dance music. Each of the nine movements is a contemporary telling of the Advent message of the anticipation of the birth of the Saviour following through to the arrival of the Three Kings. This cantata features soloists Jeanette Dessingue, Aileen Morris, Stuart Gillim, Dominick Fantacone, and Mahlon Pittman. The accompaniment consists exclusively of a woodwind trio (flute, oboe, bassoon) and percussion.

The Choral Union consists of SUNY Cortland faculty, staff, students and community members. There is no admission to this event, which is sponsored in part by the Mandatory Activity Fee.

For more information, contact Wilson at ext. 4615.

Introductory Biology Class Earns National Recognition credit for introductory college courses if they pass AP exams.

The AP program, however, has recently come under fire with many colleges deciding not to grant credit for the courses because they were not considered on par with introductory college classes, said Odile Stout, the research team leader for the project at the CEPR.

"In AP, you've got students who thought they had earned college credit and then when they got to college, they weren't getting As," Stout said. "This is AP's response to that."

Voltura, who specializes in the physiological ecology of small mammals, said her course is designed for non-biological science majors at the College. For some students, she said, Principles of Biology may be the only biology course that they take in college.

"For that reason, I think it's pretty critical to get them the right information and to show them how biology intersects with their everyday lives," Voltura said. "Whatever aspect of biology that we're talking about, I try to relate it to their lives in ways that are not familiar to them."

This semester, for example, when she taught a unit on viruses, the students wrote a paper about the bird flu. In her classes, she also discusses controversial issues that relate to biology, including cloning, stem cell research and endangered species.

Although each of her three sections of the course has an enrollment of about 110 students, Voltura often stops her lecture to ask students a question and encourage them to become engaged in the discussion. Using a Power Point presentation, Voltura projects images of animals and plants on a large screen in front of the large lecture hall throughout the 75-minute class. Occasionally, the students use clickers, handheld electronic devices, to answer questions projected on the screen.

Voltura, who lives in Cortland, has taught at the College for the past six years. She previously was a post-doctoral fellow at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C., and a post-doctoral research associate at the U.S. Geological Survey in Maryland. She earned her bachelor's degree at the University of Notre Dame, and her master's and doctoral degrees at Colorado State University.

Voltura has written or co-authored seven journal articles and recently wrote a chapter for the book, Ecological and Behavioral Methods for the Study of Bats, 2nd edition, which will be published next year by Smithsonian Institution Press.

For more information, contact Voltura at ext. 2713.

Faculty-Staff Activities

Mariangela Chandler, Academic Support and Achievement Program, received an advanced-level certificate of achievement for dedication and commitment to the success of students as evidenced by meritorious participation in the On Course II Workshop conducted by Skip Downing. At this intensive four-day professional development workshop for college and university educators, Chandler worked with a team of higher education professionals from across the country to design and facilitate learner-centered experiences. Each design team's unit was photographed and will be sent to their prospective colleges via e-mail. She found this experience to be particularly applicable for academic faculty and professional staff who teach courses or provide services for freshmen.

Ted Fay, sport management, co-presented two peer-reviewed papers and co-chaired over two peer-reviewed panel presentations at the annual conference of the North American Society for the Sociology of Sport held Nov. 1-4 in Vancouver, B.C., Canada. The papers were titled "Rights from Wrongs: Applying Dershowitz in Sport" and "Disability in Sport: Analyzing the Opportunity Spectrum." The panel presentations were titled "Sport and Human Rights I" and "Athletes with Disabilities in Sport." Fay also presented "Classification Systems – The Epicenter of Sports for Persons with Disabilities: Redefining the Context of Fair Play in Relationship to Fields of Play" at the 2006 International Paralympic Committee VISTA Research Conference in Bonn, Germany, in May.

Alexander G. Gonzalez, English, has been informed that his scholarly article "Eavan Boland's 'The Glass King' and R. G. Collingwood's Theory of Art" has been accepted for publication in the journal Studies in Contemporary Irish Writing. Partial funding for the article's research came from the Faculty Research Program.

Bonni C. Hodges and Donna M. Videto, health, discussed the application, importance and evaluation of service learning in the pre-professional training of school and community health educators at the recent annual conference of the Society for Public Health Education held in Boston, Mass. The theme of the conference was "Health as a Human Right: Health Education, Equality and Social Justice for All." Their presentation "Beyond the Comfort Zone: Internalizing the Existence of Health Disparities Through Service Learning," was part of a session on Teaching Social Justice.

Jim Reese, sport management, was co-presenter of a peer reviewed panel at the annual conference of the Sport Marketing Association in Denver, Colo. The panel took place on Nov. 3 and was titled "How to Better Prepare Sport Management Students for Careers in Sport Sales." Participating on the panel were representatives from the Denver Broncos, Colorado Rockies and Kroenke Sports.

David Snyder and Jim Reese, sport management, were co-presenters of two peer-reviewed papers at the Asian Association for Sport Management conference held Aug. 31, in Tokyo, Japan. The presentations were titled "The Japanese Who Can Say No: An Analysis of the First Professional Baseball Strike in Japan" and "A Comparative Analysis of Salary Arbitration in Major League Baseball and the Nippon Professional Baseball."

Robert Spitzer, political science, is the author of an article titled "The Commander in Chief Power and Constitutional Invention in the Bush Administration." The article appears in the just-published book, The Presidency and the Challenge of Democracy. The chapter examines the Bush administration's expansive and tendentious view of the constitutional commander in chief power, arguing that it is predicated on a distortion of constitutional history and law. The book has just been published by Palgrave Macmillan.
