Tour the Farm Facility and Learn about TC3’s Innovative Concepts
Presenters: Taylor Reid, Farm Education Director & Todd McLane, Farm Director

♦ The Sustainable Farming and Food Systems program emphasizes the practical skills needed to manage a small, diverse farm, while giving broad exposure to social and ecological issues of truly sustainable food production and distribution.

♦ The Farm to Bistro program is unique in our region, and addresses a need for new specialists in organic farming, culinary arts, hospitality, and food and wine marketing.

Discover how these programs give college students hands-on experience in every aspect of the food-production system.
TC3 operates its own organic farm while also supplying fresh, local produce to Coltivare, the College's downtown Ithaca culinary center and restaurant.

As part of the Farm to Bistro program, the 50 acre fruit and vegetable operation directly supports students in TC3’s innovative Sustainable Farming & Food Systems program. It also runs a CSA (Community Supported Agriculture marketing program). The farm will be certified organic after a transition period and, in the future, will include a greenhouse and hoop houses for year-round growing, as well as an orchard and other exiting agricultural opportunities still in development.

TC3 Students experience cultivation of the land using sustainable farming practices on a farm which will eventually run free of the commercial energy grid through the use of solar and geothermal technology.

ACE students will tour the farm facilities and may participate in farm work projects such as: harvesting vegetables for sale, inoculating shiitake mushroom logs and cultivating farm fields.

The Farm program supports four degree programs at the College;
Culinary Arts and Sustainable Farming and Food Systems which both started in 2014, as well as Wine Marketing and Hotel and Restaurant Management.
