A Message From the Chair

Brian Murphy '83, Chair,
Cortland College Foundation

Unprecedented Generosity

What a difference a year makes.

In my 2008-09 Annual Report message to you, I noted the substantial market losses that affected our endowment but were tempered by a near-record year for donations and an increase in size of the average gift.

This year the news is glowing. SUNY Cortland shattered its giving records in a resounding fashion. Despite the uncertainty of world economies slowly digging out from a severe recession, our alumni and friends raised $6.2 million in 2009-10.

We became the envy of not only our sister institutions but many colleges and universities across the nation. We garnered widespread publicity with headlines that trumpeted three of the most generous gifts in the College's history.

This trio of unprecedented commitments from two alumni, John Fantauzzi '58 and Michael O'Reilly '58, and Louise Conley, a Cortland College Foundation board member and exceptional friend of the College, are transformational in nature. The donors' stories, which are contained in this report, have inspired us all.

Loyal donors to the annual fund continue to provide program-enriching support for student scholarships, awards and research. They augment the performing arts, faculty development, leadership programs and civic engagement on the campus and in the community. Clearly, every gift to the College and the foundation makes a difference in the life of SUNY Cortland.

As a member of the Cortland College Foundation Board of Directors, I had the opportunity to return to campus several times this past year. I have met with countless alumni, faculty, staff and students. The campus continues to evolve and to improve. I can assure you that you would be proud of what is taking place.

The College completed work on its 10-year strategic plan during the past year. In short, SUNY Cortland seeks to become a leader in educational innovation and experiential learning, to be recognized for programs of academic excellence, to be a national role model for the promotion of health and well being, and to maximize its organizational resources.

The Cortland College Foundation Board of Directors is working to develop funding which will support that plan, while the Division of Institutional Advancement staff members are working diligently to raise private dollars to support these strategic priorities.

On behalf of the Cortland College Foundation Board of Directors, thank you for your continued support of SUNY Cortland.

The Francis J. Cheney Legacy

Louise M. Conley discovered her grandfather's heritage at SUNY Cortland and then made her own mark.

... He loved culture and scholarship, but truth and noble character more. He was a loyal helpful friend to his students and associates ... in them he still lives. His work goes on."

— class of 1912

When encountering children who grow up to be like their parents and grandparents, people will often utter the familiar idiom, "The apple doesn't fall far from the tree." But when the "tree" is as stately, beloved and respected as the late Cortland Normal School principal Francis J. Cheney, any comparison becomes an accolade of the highest order.

Louise M. Conley, the maternal granddaughter of Cheney, never knew him, but would come to discover they were alike in many important ways. He died long before she was born. In fact, he passed away while in office in 1912 when Louise's mother, Clara Cheney '17, was a child. Clara's mother died, too, within the decade.

A few years after, Clara, also a Vassar alumna, married Rollin McCarthy '16, an engineer, while both were graduate students at Cornell University. They moved from the area and their daughter, Louise, heard constantly about Cortland Normal but would know little about her accomplished grandfather until a half-century later.

"My mother had passed away in 1990, but my dad was living in a nursing home and I was getting his mail," recalled Louise, a licensed psychologist who resides in Princeton, NJ.

"There was this notice about the rededication of Old Main. They asked for pictures. I remembered some pictures in this scrapbook and sent them up. That's when I came up and saw his pictures in Old Main and his plaque for the first time in the Old Main lobby."

The heartfelt words the Cortland Normal Class of 1912 students used to eulogize her grandfather struck a chord deep within her. "Strength of conviction was his, but no trace of bitterness, strength of mind and character, but no trace of arrogance. He loved culture and scholarship, but truth and noble character more. He was a loyal helpful friend to his students and associates ... in them he still lives. His work goes on."

Louise discovered in ways previously unknown to her that Principal Cheney was an integral part of who she was as a person, too.

"There was something in the material about his knowing the students individually and knowing their idiosyncrasies," she said. "It's kind of eerie because the reason I became interested in psychology was that I was teaching girls math and they didn't think they could do the math. And they could. They had the aptitude. So I became interested in the psychology of that. It was kind of cyclical."

Moved by the love shown her legendary grandfather, Louise connected with the College. In 1997, she donated the funds to create the biennial Francis J. Cheney Educational Issues Conference at SUNY Cortland. At the same time, she established the Francis J. Cheney Scholarship for students majoring in education, a profession familiar to three generations of her family.

In March 2010, Louise made a $1 million bequest that will create the first endowed academic chair at SUNY Cortland. The Louise M. Conley Chair in Educational Leadership will generate $40,000-$50,000 annually for its future recipients.

Her gift will strengthen the rich educational heritage on the Cortland campus that remains as important to Louise at the start of the 21st century as it was to her grandfather who helped to prepare Cortland students for the century before.

Conley, who has created scholarship opportunities for Cortland students, chats with two current undergraduates in the Admissions Office reception area.

Building Tomorrow's Leaders

Danielle Singer provides a glowing example of the College's mission to produce well-rounded individuals who seek to make a difference in the lives of others.

Outside the classroom, Danielle Singer really gets around.

When she's not signing up new voters at a Corey Union booth, the aspiring lawyer stumps locally for a national politician or offers free diet and exercise advice to teens through the Cortland County Health Department.

In 2008, Singer spearheaded a food and money collection initiative among local and regional businesses to feed an estimated 1,000 campus and community volunteers whose Relay for Life walking marathon on the campus raised $45,370 for the fight to end cancer.

Singer, now a senior, simply loves to volunteer. She is thankful she studies at a college that supports and encourages civic engagement.

"I think the institution has done a great job with getting students more involved outside of the classroom," observed Singer of Binghamton, N.Y., the recipient of the 2010-11 Institute for Civic Engagement Scholarship as well as political science academic awards of "Best Paper" and "Best Portfolio for a Junior."

Expanded scholarships that support leadership across the curriculum have aided the College's 2009 strategic plan by strongly encouraging service to the campus and community.

"I don't really do volunteer work for (the scholarship), I volunteer just for the satisfaction of helping someone who needs that assistance," added Singer, who plans to attend law school.

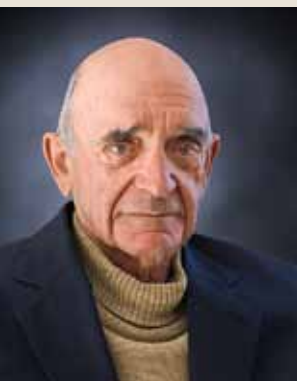

Singer explains to a classmate how to complete a voter registration form.

"I think it is so important to support a group that is teaching us to give back, not only to the campus but to organizations here and the wider community around upstate New York."

John Fantauzzi '58

Sharing the American Dream

To millions of its immigrants, the United States has been synonymous with boundless opportunity and the chance to test one's capabilities limited only by his or her work ethic.

For many SUNY Cortland students whose families are new to America, the name of John Fantauzzi '58 conjures a similar meaning.

A retired schoolteacher, John has donated $4.5 million to the College over the past 24 years, including a record $3.8 million gift in 2010. By any barometer chosen, he is SUNY Cortland's most generous donor.

"He is changing students' lives," says Doug DeRancy '75, assistant to the vice president for institutional advancement. "He hopes that his generosity will plant the seed for others to do similar types of things for the College. As a teacher and a lifelong student of history, he values the importance of role models."

His newest gift, originally part of a $5.18 million bequest, increases the number of Fantauzzi Scholarships awarded annually from 10 currently to 40 in three years. Each four-year scholarship, valued at $16,000, is presented to a SUNY Cortland student who has maintained a 2.7 grade point average or higher and who is the child or grandchild of immigrants to the U.S. Since 1990, Fantauzzi Scholarships have aided more than 50 SUNY Cortland students whose ancestry can be traced to Europe, Asia, North and Central America.

"John lives a life that is very similar to the life of Warren Buffett in that John truly believes in giving a substantial amount of money back to a charitable cause," explained DeRancy.

"In John's case, it's to support children of immigrants to get a college education at his alma mater. I think he's a hero and I don't use that term loosely. He's spent his life raising private capital with the intent of giving all of it back to provide the opportunity of a college education."

The Gift of a Lifetime

A Guardian Angelfish Scholarship gave Devine Bailey a second chance at earning his college degree.

Devine Bailey's fate hinged on a plea to the College's Financial Aid Office.

As an independent student with no parent he could turn to for financial support, he faced the prospect of not completing his college degree.

"I still needed $5,000 to finish," said the senior kinesiology major who is concentrating in sport studies. On Aug. 10, 2009, he asked for advice in a letter to the Financial Aid Office.

"My main goal now is to graduate from SUNY Cortland, not only to make my mother proud — I know she is watching over me — but to make myself proud and to become a productive member of society," he wrote.

For one so young, a lifetime is crammed into Bailey's 23 years. He escaped the tough streets of Harlem. He excelled at high school in Troy and made a difference mentoring youth in basketball at the Troy Family YMCA. He became the first in his family to earn a college associate's degree from SUNY Delhi.

After he had transferred to SUNY Cortland, Bailey's life became unraveled with the illness of his mother, Cassandra Bailey, and her eventual death from cancer in the summer of 2008.

"She is the foundation of my life, my support," Bailey said. "After that I really struggled."

Bailey's grades slipped. He was suspended from SUNY Cortland.

"As time passed, I knew my Mom would want me to pursue my degree," he said. "I petitioned the College to continue my studies. By the end of that Spring 2009 semester, I pulled my overall grade point average up to a 2.0."

He could only obtain federal loans, which were not enough to cover expenses for the year. He had nobody willing to co-sign for a private loan. Pell and other grant aid is unavailable to independent status students.

"I was frustrated," he observed. "Within a week, the Financial Aid Office contacted me about a brand new scholarship called the Guardian Angelfish Scholarship."

The anonymous donor made a five-year pledge to support the studies of a current student who encounters a sudden financial roadblock to completing his or her education.

Bailey will make that donor proud. His grade point average rose to 3.02 for the Fall 2009 semester. Meanwhile, he now has the opportunity to participate in his favorite extracurricular activities, including the Black Student Union and coaching the Women's Basketball Club team.

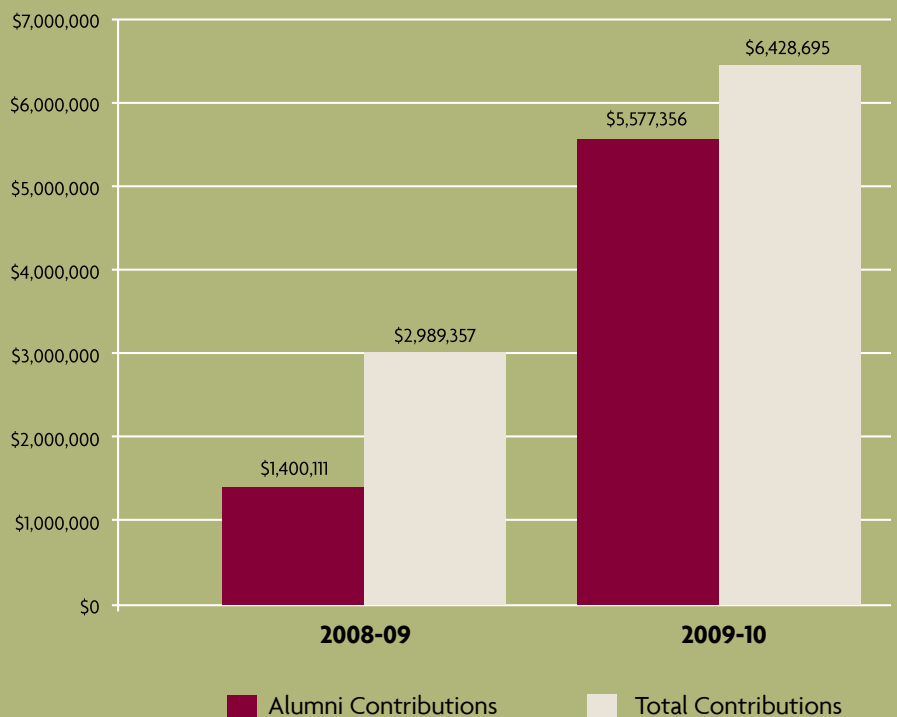

Bailey attends a recent meeting of the Black Student Union.

"It is because of you that I will graduate from SUNY Cortland and achieve my dreams," he says of his nameless benefactor.

Alumni Giving at a Glance

Alumni contributions jumped from 46.8 percent in 2008-2009 to a staggering 86.8 percent in 2009-2010.

Thankful for the Memories

Being loyal donors to SUNY Cortland unites two alumnae who attended the College almost a half century apart.

Outside Sheldon Hall at SUNY Oswego, Alicia Grisel Jones '07 relishes her work as a research associate for the Oswego College Foundation.

Andrea Bucher Guy '59 revisits her third grade classroom at Alton B. Parker Elementary School in Cortland.

When Andrea Bucher Guy '59 felt financially comfortable, she magnanimously started making an annual gift to SUNY Cortland 19 years ago.

Alicia Grisel Jones '07, who was just a youngster then, represents a new breed of state university graduate who has supported the alma mater from the day she graduated.

In fact, many Alicias and Andreas are out there. Steadfast alumni and friends, their collective generosity, now more than ever in these difficult economic times, sustains Cortland's wide-ranging educational initiatives.

Guy attributes her happy and successful career to her education at Cortland, starting with Ralph Adams

Brown and Andrew Banse, former faculty who recognized her potential and accelerated the precocious teen through College in three years.

"I've always had a thirst for knowledge," said Guy, who resides in Cortland. Due to her fast-tracked career, she was able to retire at age 55 after teaching for 34 years. "Children are always eager to learn about everything. I had so much fun working with them."

Michael O'Reilly '58

A Passion for Teaching Science

If Michael J. O'Reilly '58 appears passionate about science education, you'll have to excuse his enthusiasm. When he was an undergraduate 50 years ago, his SUNY Cortland mentors, legends such as Van A. Burd, Margaret T. Halligan, Walter Thurber and R. Dean Schick, lit a fire in him to teach others. The flame still burns brightly today.

"Education still excites me," says O'Reilly, who retired after 33 years of teaching biology and, for awhile, English as a second language to honors students as well as others facing the daily challenges of poverty and broken homes, in Spring Valley, N.Y.

The hard-working son of a state highway engineer, O'Reilly discovered much more than an avocation for teaching from his SUNY Cortland professors.

"They gave me courage," recalled O'Reilly. "I had some very understanding people at Cortland. I was starting late as a college student."

O'Reilly finished strong. He became a perennial Dean's List student who was well prepared to later teach an array of subjects like ecology, life science and general science. He loved his profession and wanted to encourage today's Cortland students to follow in his footsteps.

So, in 2010, he made provisions for a $1.24 million bequest in his will to create the Michael J. O'Reilly Scholarship in Science Teacher Education at SUNY Cortland. The future award will target SUNY Cortland undergraduate and graduate students with financial need to pursue a junior high or senior high school science teaching career. He envisions his scholarship recipients as having a transformational impact on their students.

"My hope is that they will inspire our nation's children to pursue science as a field of study and a career," concluded O'Reilly.

Our nation needs exceptional science educators at all levels. O'Reilly knows that as well as most. Through his generosity, he is working to make that worthy goal an attainable reality on a campus committed to improving the lives of others through education.

"I'm tremendously thankful that I was able to go to college," she said. "I think SUNY Cortland is probably one of if not the best SUNY colleges that one could go to in the system."

Jones, a former Dragon Dialer for The Cortland Fund, earned her bachelor's degree in health science, and served as president of the Student Alumni Association, member of the Senior Class Gift Committee, and as a founding member as well as president and chair of the SUNY Cortland Relay for Life.

"I really felt I wanted to go into some sort of health fundraising," noted Jones. Eventually realizing that fundraising itself was the career she had developed in college, she became instead a research associate for SUNY Oswego's College Foundation.

Both women are thoughtful in their gift-giving to Cortland.

Guy supports the Outdoor Education Center at Raquette Lake.

"I think every student should experience it," Guy said. "I think the Adirondacks gives you an understanding of how beautiful nature is, how important it is to have things in their natural state, and how crucial it is to preserve our trees and animal habitats."

"Initially my gifts were unrestricted because that supports the areas of greatest need," said Jones, who at Cortland received many scholarships for leadership and community service. "I switched to making a restricted gift to support scholarships, because that was what made it possible for me to attend Cortland."

Beyond the Field: Making the Case for Athletics

Dan Pitcher '10 embodies outstanding academics and athletics.

Competition on the field has always enhanced the classroom performance of Dan Pitcher '10.

"Athletics formats your week for you and you know when you've got time to do other things," explained Pitcher. "It can really be a tool if you look at it that way. I don't mean to make light of it; it's not easy to do. I've worked at it a long time and I take pride in both my athletics and my academics."

Pitcher completed his bachelor's degree in psychology with a 4.08 grade point average and has returned to his alma mater in pursuit of a master's degree in sport management. A second-year captain, he quarterbacked the varsity football team.

He freely acknowledges that he has benefitted from the College's faithful underwriting of its broad array of sports programs.

"As an athlete here at Cortland, I can say we have everything we need to be a very successful program, particularly at the Division III level," he said. "You're going to get some of the best equipment and the best travel arrangements you could find."

Although NCAA rules prevent money raised for athletics from being used for scholarships or directly benefitting individual scholar-athletes, Pitcher asserts that funds raised by alumni and others in support of the athletics program have improved the college experience for students participating in all sports.

Following a 2009 strategic plan, Cortland has committed itself to enhancing the athletics program, performing arts and other student co-curricular activities that develop students who are known by their distinctive drive for excellence and their focus on measurable outcomes and overall accountability.

The College will depend greatly on philanthropy to reach its goal in retaining and growing these learning and leadership opportunities outside the classroom. State resources, the main support of co-curricular programs in the past, are dwindling. The situation affects athletics severely.

"We're trying to prepare for the future," noted Mike Urtz, SUNY Cortland director of athletics. "I think the administration has done a good job of protecting us in that the effect has been minor so far. We do look to the support of alumni and friends of the College as we prepare for the future of Cortland athletics."

"Some of our biggest challenges, moving forward, are in the area of facilities and staffing for athletics. Our competition is making major commitments to these areas. So we can't just keep doing what we're doing to stay on top."

As someone who exemplifies excellence both inside and outside the classroom, Pitcher makes a strong case for future institutional support of athletics.

"I think interest in the College is certainly growing and a lot of that is because of the athletic program," he said. "Obviously, we're an academic institution first and foremost but to have successful athletics at the forefront and to see SUNY Cortland at the top of the standings is very important. It paints us in a very positive light."

All in a Day's Internship

Lou Crispo's summer work with a financial giant reflects the College's goal of providing dynamic learning opportunities.

Last summer, senior Louis Crispo doffed his college duds and donned a suit to enter the imposing doors of corporate America.

The senior business economics major from Scarsdale, N.Y., believes the summer internship at Smith Barney in New York City will be just the ticket to a career in the finance industry after he graduates in December 2010.

"I think an internship is something that everyone somewhere in their college career needs to try," said Crispo, who worked with the company's client portfolios and updated accounts and information. "It's the closest thing to having a job that they are going to experience."

Recalling how he attended meetings with the company's money managers and listened to speakers address different investment tools, Crispo compares hands-on learning to mastering a new language.

"What you learn in the classroom are the words and the terminologies," said Crispo, who became aware of the opportunity through the College's Career Services. "In an internship, you are putting those words into sentences. So you learn about the tools in school, but an experience in the workplace shows you how to use them."

To afford the internship, he had saved money the previous summer and, during his time as an apprentice money manager, economized by taking the train between home and Manhattan instead of living there. Smith Barney paid him a modest stipend and the professionals there magnanimously bought him lunch daily.

"An internship is great but you have to pay for it," Crispo remarked.

In coming years, the College plans to enable even more students to engage in hands-on learning opportunities. The goal is to position SUNY Cortland as a national leader for its focus on real, applied innovative undergraduate learning opportunities.

Crispo put his Cortland lessons to work in Manhattan last summer.

In the face of dwindling New York state resources, the College is looking to the generosity of alumni, faculty, staff and friends to help expand internship opportunities. As an example, Anthony R. Moon '86, a Cortland College Foundation board member and managing director, treasury, with General Electric in Stamford, Conn., recently created an endowed scholarship to support expenses for future student interns, students conducting fieldwork and other hands-on experiences.

"Having such a scholarship is something that would be appreciated by any student, I'm sure of it," Crispo concluded.

Partners in Leadership

In 2003, SUNY Cortland established its leadership gift recognition program called Partners in Leadership. Its mission is to encourage the highest level of philanthropy to the College while honoring those individuals, businesses and organizations who are SUNY Cortland's most generous annual donors.

The Partners' name reflects the substantial collaboration between those donors and SUNY Cortland. Their gifts impact the scope and quality of the educational experience available to current Cortland students.

The Red Dragon Society, as indicated by a diamond (), recognizes loyal benefactors who have provided financial support to the College at any giving level for the previous three or more consecutive years. This special group of alumni, parents and friends regularly support, sustain and enhance the Cortland experience.

The following gift recognition societies reflect the level of giving by their members between July 1, 2010 and June 30, 2011.

Associate Partners in Leadership

The Associate Partners in Leadership are graduates of the last decade who make an annual gift of at least $100 for every year since their graduation date. Young alumni in the early stages of their career are invited to join this group, which enjoys all the benefits of full Partners in Leadership.

The Lofty Elm Society

The Lofty Elm Society, which takes its name from the first verse of the Alma Mater, was established in 2003 to recognize alumni, emeriti and friends who record estate commitments, establish life income gifts, or make other planned gifts for the benefit of SUNY Cortland through the Cortland College Foundation. The individuals listed here have confirmed such gift plans and were recognized as members of the Lofty Elm Society as of June 30, 2010.
