NEW PROGRAM PROPOSAL

PLEASE CONSULT THE CURRICULUM CHANGE GUIDE PRIOR TO COMPLETING THIS FORM
Any new course proposals, alterations or deletions of existing courses, associated with an alteration of a program proposal should accompany the program proposal.

PLEASE ATTACH: 1) A DESCRIPTION OF THE NEW PROGRAM AS IT WOULD APPEAR IN THE COLLEGE CATALOG AND 2) A FOUR-YEAR PROGRAM MODEL.

Department: Philosophy

Program Title: Minor in Peace Studies

Justification for a New Program: The proposed minor in peace studies will complement the major and minor in social philosophy. It is part of the strategic development of the philosophy department that has included establishing the Center for Ethics, Peace and Social Justice. Two key peace studies courses (in War and Terrorism and the Philosophies of Nonviolence) have been developed, taught and are now permanent course offerings.

Hello Andy,

I suggest that POL 456, International Politics of the Middle East and Race and Politics in America (AAS 262/POL262) could be a nice additions to the suggested course categories.

Cheers,

Seth

Dear Colleagues,

For some time, in the philosophy department, we have been working on the design of a peace studies minor. I designed, passed through curriculum and have taught courses in war and terrorism and philosophies of nonviolence. We are now ready to submit paperwork to the A&S curriculum committee for the minor.

Of the 18 credits, six will be chosen from non-philosophy courses. It is here I require your help:

A) Can you tell me if the proposed courses (see below) have a substantial content related to peace studies?
B) Are these courses actually taught with the frequency suggested in the course catalogue?
C) Can you suggest any other courses that would be suitable as options for students interested in peace studies?

The proposed minor will be:

Hi Andy, In history, yes, HIS 430, 460, and JST 461 (Sandy Gutman has taught this most recently) all have the substantive content the minor requires, and the frequency codes are appropriate. Additionally, I would suggest HIS 304 (American Republic, 1840-1877) and HIS 348 (Europe since 1914), both taught once every couple of years at least [C], although the catalog might differ officially—we should probably revise it! 304 is essentially about the Civil War, and 348 focuses on various topics, but the two world wars figure prominently, as one might expect, so it likely offers much to an interested peace studies minor.

Hope this helps, and thanks for the inquiry!

Regards, Girish

Andrew,

I asked Herb to comment on his two courses, Soc of Violence and Capital Punishment. He is fine with including them in the Peace Studies minor and he had some additional suggestions (see list below). You might also think about including Sociology of International Conflict, SOC 366.

Thanks.

Sorry that I forgot to get back to you regarding the proposed Peace Studies minor. Essentially, I don't see anything wrong with it. The only suggestion I could think of would be to add certain courses such as HIS 430 (The Vietnam War) HIS 452 (War and Diplomacy: WWI), HIS 453 (" " : WWII) POL 456 (International Politics in the Middle East). I'm more than happy to have Peace Studies minors in the courses of mine that are included.

Minor in Peace Studies
Discussion points:
  • Students often add minor later in their career. PHI 331 and PHI 330 being taught alternating years may be problematic.
  • Concern that there is no introductory course for Peace Studies
    o Create an Intro to Peace Studies course that would meet GE requirement as well (replace PHI 140 or PHI 100)
    o Make Intro to Peace Studies course a pre-requisite for minor in Peace Studies
    o Change the frequency code for PHI 331 and PHI 330 from C to A or B o Change the requirement to read PHI 331 and OR PHI 330

New Course Proposal
PHY 320 Energy and Sustainability
Discussion points:
  • Per college policy new courses cannot be 300/500 level courses. In order to share resources new courses have to be 400/500 level courses per faculty senate.
    o Note that Curriculum Guide needs to reflect this • Department wants to submit course for GE approval and 400 level courses typically are not GEs.
  • There are no pre-requisites for this course – should 300 or 400 level courses have pre-requisites?
  • If PHY is changed to a four hundred level, new numbers are recommended as there is an existing 420 (classical mechanics). The number for 520 could be

Re: Peace and Conflict Studies Minor (tabled 10/21/09)

Please find attached:
   a) Revised Peace and Conflict studies proposal
   b) E-mails from all relevant departments

Time-scale.

We originally submitted a proposal for a Peace Studies Minor in March 2009. CCRC considered the proposal April 1, 2009 and requested revisions. We made revisions and submitted to J. Reese (the chair at the time). Our revisions were not submitted by J. Reese to CCRC until fall 2009 and considered Dec 2, 2009. J. Reese did not inform us of the decision until Feb 22, 2010. We tabled a discussion by the CEPS board for fall 2010. In fall 2010 a sub-committee of CEPS was formed (chaired by Dr. Kathy Russell) to consult widely on campus. The sub-committee included faculty not on the CEPS board. The committee met periodically in fall 2010, spring and fall 2011 to consider and address the substantive points raised by CCRC:

Discussion points raised by CCRC:
1. Students often add minor later in their career. PHI 331 and PHI 330 being taught alternating years may be problematic.
2. Concern that there is no introductory course for Peace Studies
3. Create an Intro to Peace Studies course that would meet GE requirement as well (replace PHI 140 or PHI 100)
4. Make Intro to Peace Studies course a pre-requisite for minor in Peace Studies
5. Change the frequency code for PHI 331 and PHI 330 from C to A or B
6. Change the requirement to read PHI 331 and OR PHI 330

The findings of the CEPS sub-committee were reported to me at the end of fall semester 2011. I was on Sabbatical in Spring 2012 and looked at the committee’s findings this semester.

The attached revised proposal was the results of our consultation, deliberation and response to the concerns of the CCRC. In the nature of course design and curriculum changes some of our work took a great deal of time.

To clarify:

a) Introductory course. After discussion it was decided that we should have introductory courses at the 100 and 200 level that would meet the requirements suggested by CCRC (beginning courses that were taught frequently). PHI 160 and FSA 250 were the results. These new courses have now passed through the curriculum process.

b) Only one of PHI 330 and PHI 331 is now required.

c) Suggested elective courses went through several iterations. The current list has the full support of the appropriate departments (see attached e-mails). There are now far fewer electives with prerequisites.

d) Name change. The CEPS sub-committee suggested, after consulting various academic departments, that the name of the minor be changed from Peace Studies Minor to Peace and Conflict Studies Minor, to better reflect the content of the minor.

TOTAL CREDIT HOURS REQUIRED FOR MINOR: 18

* Prerequisite required
Students may use no more than 9 credit hours from their major toward the completion of the Peace and Conflict Studies Minor.
¶ Students can take this 1-credit course up to 4 times for credit.

Student adviser will be the Director of the Center for Ethics, Peace and Social Justice or her/his delegate.
Andy

I am all in favor of a Peace and Conflict minor which is perfect for IST students (and ANT students as well in my opinion). I am completely in support of using IST 200 in the minor as an elective. Good luck with the process and I look forward to seeing this minor on the books soon.

Dear Colleagues,

We are making steady progress toward a peace and conflict studies minor. Attached is a draft of the proposal.

You will see that among the requirements and possible electives are courses from your department. Can you confirm that it is acceptable to include the course(s) as listed?

Thanks and stay well,

Andy

Hi Andrew, thanks for sharing this—we can certainly make seats available for the two political science courses listed for the minor. I'm hoping that, in the future, we will be able to recruit for our other line (the one formerly filled by Adrian Hull), and at such time, be able to offer another course or two in this general area. Aside from that, I should note that we are offering a special topics course this spring on "Terrorism" (POL 229) as a one-time offering that might be of interest to some of your students.

Hi Andy,

The proposal looks good to me as well. I should however inform you that the person who teaches History of the Holocaust and History of the Middle East in our department is Sandy Gutman and he has retired. We may or may not get someone in the future to teach those classes. Some of our other faculty may be able to teach these classes but not on the same regular basis that Sandy did.

I hope this information helps.

Andy: I’ve consulted with the affected faculty and there seems to be no problem including the courses in our department that are listed. As we discussed on the telephone, however, the Sociology of International Conflict has not been taught in a very long while and I doubt whether it will be in the foreseeable future. That one might be deleted from the proposed minor. We’re happy to support the new minor and wish you the best of luck. Please let me know if there is anything else we can do to assist. Skipper

Thanks and stay well,

Andy: I just spoke with John Sosa and he suggested that you might also want to include SOC/ANT 230 (Prejudice and Discrimination) in the minor. John believes that given how he teaches that course it may, in fact, be even more appropriate than SOC/ANT 352. Skipper

Dear Colleagues,

We are making steady progress toward a peace and conflict studies minor. Attached is a draft of the proposal.

You will see that among the requirements and possible electives are courses from your department. Can you confirm that it is acceptable to include the course(s) as listed?

Thanks and stay well,

Andy
The courses listed in the Economics Department are acceptable to be included in the Peace and Conflict Studies minor. Best of luck.

Andrew,

The CCRC has voted a contingent pass for recommendation of the minor in Peace and Conflict Studies.

The committee has asked for the following:

1. Please fill out a new Form 4 for record keeping purposes indicating the new title. You do not need to get signatures or provide support documents.

2. A table showing when the courses are being offered for the minor across several years (there would be repeats). I have attached a basic table template. This would address committee concerns about ability of students to complete the minor in regard to access to courses. If I can help with this process, please let me know. In addition I informed the committee that I would verify the course frequency codes of the courses, given that these are not always accurate.

If I can provide assistance or further information, just let me know.

Take care,
Carol
